Score: 87-90

Lighter-bodied, but with good energy to the pomegranate and damson plum notes. Shows a liberal savory edge throughout and a good flash of iron on the finish. —J.M.

The vineyards are located between Margaux and St Julien, and they were frosted, although Frédéric and Hélène opted not to try to use any second-generation fruit. This has a lovely blackcurrant freshness with a curranty concentration, with little touches of black cherry, in a very fresh, very bright, surprisingly fragrant and aromatic style. The palate is fresh, supple, cool, with lovely fruit substance and a fresh central seam of tannins. It is rich, sinewy, poised, bright. Long moderately grained tannins, For a frosted vineyard, a little west of the Gironde, this perfumed, grippy and ultimately ripe wine represents a great deal of work and commitment. A very fine Retout here.
